The SeattleCoach Training & Development Program

General Program, Vision and Goals

The program focuses equally on two core elements that are crucial to solid leadership as a coach:

- The essential skills that are the tools to learn, practice, refine and to then personalize.
- The essential presence that flows from a leader/coach's awareness of their own style, niche and specialty.

During an initial interview, participants are asked to clarify their goals in professional coach training. Whether those goals are for application within an existing company or role, or as an entrepreneurial coach, our track record shows that our coaches are well-prepared for examination and credentialing by the International Coach Federation (ICF).

History of the Program

Through thirty years as a master coach, entrepreneur, licensed marriage and family therapist and campus minister, Patricia Burgin is a recognized expert in bringing together and facilitating motivated groups and teams. She thinks groups are magic. After practicing full-time as a coach for several years and becoming credentialed by the ICF, she was receiving a steady stream of requests to offer professional coach training. In the spring of 2008, she broadcast an invitation to several of her favorite leaders to come explore the idea and, finding significant enthusiasm, she designed the foundational Modules of the Program.

- Module I ("The Coaching Alliance: Process, Change and Key Skills" (ACC) and
- Module II ("Personal Presence and the Core Competencies of Coaching" (ACC),

The first training group (we call them cohorts) launched in the spring of 2008, and has been followed by twenty-three more. New cohorts now launch at least twice a year.

As they complete our foundational training, participants are solidly prepared to apply for initial certification with the ICF. And following completion of our foundational training, SeattleCoaches are invited to continue their development with us in the advanced content of Module III.

Patty Talks About the Three-fold and Pragmatic Philosophy of the SeattleCoach Approach:

As a professional coach, you will form your own view of coaching. And you have a right to know how I've arrived at mine. From the beginning of SeattleCoach I've aimed for far more than coach training. Believing that professional coaching is a leadership movement, we aim for in-depth personal leadership development in your coaching mindset. That means that in addition to teaching the essential skills of professional coaching, our systemic development of coaches rests on three components:

1. The first is systems theory, and its two foundational components:
 - The differentiated leader's openness to testing, learning and growing. The influential people in any group are the ones who are continuously open to learning about both themselves and their impact.

- The leader's ability to stay graciously and generously connected: The power of any network is proportional to the quality and quantity of connections between the links--beginning with the differentiated leader.
2. The second component is the emerging field of neuroscience: Strengths-based/somatic intelligence and process. Simply put, our human brains learn best and change most positively and sustainably when we are in neurologically safe alliances: Where our voices are heard, and where there is sufficient predictability and mutual respect.
 3. And third, in all of our curriculum and presenting, we use the human filters of the seasoned leaders we attract. We pick people who come to us with the habit of continuously learning, people who curate proven methods and approaches. Our participant-coaches bring to their development rich backgrounds in a variety of leadership and management approaches. Building on a foundation of essential skills and presence, our tribe includes experts who coach from a variety of contexts: Executive, Agile/Lean, wellness, HR and leadership development, along with Jewish, Buddhist and Christian spiritualities. We all know that the ROI of both time and money matters.

In addition, two key factors are unique to the SeattleCoach approach to developing coaches.

1. First is the highly personalized, face-to-face nature of the training. Unlike most coach-training programs, this one meets locally with small cohorts of participants. With a maximum of ten to fifteen members, we meet weekly and ask participants to work between sessions as homework partners. And when we've concluded, our members continue to grow together as allies in the Pacific Northwest.
2. And second, the participants we select are proven leaders. They know themselves well, are socially and emotionally mature, already think of themselves as coaches and are eager to refine their skills and personal presence.

Intended Participants

The leaders and managers who enter the SeattleCoach Training Program fall into three categories:

- Leaders who come with the support of their companies, groups or congregations with the goal of building a strong coaching culture within their organizations,
- Professionals who want to build their depth of skill as a leader, mentor and manager,
- And entrepreneurial leaders who are building a professional coaching practice.

Pre-requisites

Training with SeattleCoach takes place in stages. Each is highly interactive, building on individual strengths and team learning. We focus on bedrock coaching skills, the realities of human change management and on personal presence. Because of our areas of focus, we ask that applicants to the program bring a minimum of ten years of professional and academic experience.

We start with an informational interview during which we welcome your questions, find out about your background and goals, and get a general, intuitive sense of your maturity and "fit" for this Program. If green lights ensue for both of us, you will be invited to an orientation meeting and to collaborate on the meeting schedule.

Admission and Expectations

Admission to the Program is by mutual agreement following an initial interview.

Requirements for admission:

1. A minimum of ten years of academic and professional work.
2. A face-to-face interview with a SeattleCoach faculty member.

Your availability to your peer coaches and to coming to our times together well-prepared are keys to our success. In light of that, we ask that all coaches agree to:

1. Treat attendance as a top priority in their schedules and to participate actively in all of our sessions.
2. If a coach-in-training must miss a session, he or she will be asked to make up the work via individual tutoring with a SeattleCoach faculty member at an additional expense.
3. Following each of our monthly gatherings, coaches will receive a "homework" email, and be expected to complete a minimum of one hour per week of peer coaching, and a minimum of a second hour per week of reading and study.
4. And from the beginning of training, coaches are expected to learn and practice the ICF Code of Ethics, Core Competencies and standards of confidentiality, beginning with the group's process and with their peer coaching.

Costs

SeattleCoach is one of a very few internationally credentialed programs to be taught exclusively face-to-face: We think it makes for the most effective environment for developing coaches. The only travel expense is Seattle-area traffic.

Tuition is $7500:

The Core Program/Tuition includes:

1. Approximately thirty weeks of intensive, face-to-face coach development within a cohort of carefully selected mid-career professionals.
2. Seventy-five hours of coach-specific training in two Core Modules:
 - a. Module I: The Coaching Alliance: Process, Change and Key Skills (ACC)
 - b. Module II: Personal Presence and the Core Competencies of Coaching (ACC)
3. Seven hours of group mentor coaching with written feedback. A total of ten hours are required for an ICF Credential. The remaining three are done individually with a mentor coach (see "related costs" below).
4. Weekly real-time practice with peer coaches which will help you to accumulate thirty hours of coaching for your coaching log (a total of 100 hours are required for ACC certification).
5. A minimum of three coaching opportunities observed by a credentialed mentor coach.
6. A hardcopy of The SeattleCoach Playbook: Module I and Module II.
7. During the course of Module II, tuition includes an optional, as-needed hour of personal processing or review with a faculty member.
8. Solid preparation for the ICF Coach Knowledge Assessment which is required for the ICF's ACC Credential.

One additional text is required for Module II and is not included in the tuition.

Payment of Tuition

Each SeattleCoach cohort is highly customized in scheduling, class composition and materials. And each cohort has a maximum size of fifteen coaches. Because of this, we ask that invited participants reserve their spot in Module I prior to our launch. Through the end of 2017, the tuition for Module I is $3500, payable by check, purchase order or credit card. If your company is paying for your participation, or for your entire cohort's, we can set up a purchase order with your invoicing system. Just put us in touch with your sponsor and financial administrator. SeattleCoach is a Microsoft Preferred Vendor (#0001125847).

Following your interview and invitation, you can reserve your place (and be invited to your Cohort's meet-and-greet) with:

- Full payment for Module I of $3500 (which includes the $350 non-refundable deposit), or
- A $350 non-refundable deposit (we'll then charge the balance to your card just prior to the first official meeting (unless you let us know you'd rather bring a check to the first meeting).

For each cohort, Module II begins within a week or two after the close of Module I, and includes seven hours of Group Mentor Coaching (an ICF Credentialing requirement) along with written feedback.

Through the end of 2017, the tuition for Module II is $4000. Click here for all of the details and links.

Withdrawals and Refunds

If, within twenty-four hours of the first meeting of Module I, a participant decides to withdraw, SeattleCoach LLC will make a full refund, minus the $350 deposit. After that, we consider each coach a committed participant and tuition is non-refundable and can't be transferred for use in individual sessions.

Related Costs

Some coaches are not aiming at Certification with the ICF (at least initially). For those who are, these are the additional costs to budget for:

1. In addition to the seven hours of group mentor coaching that are completed in Module II, three more hours must be completed individually with an ICF-credentialed coach prior to applying for certification. These sessions are available from SeattleCoach at a student rate of $250 per session. And as a member of the SeattleCoach Network, discounted individual coaching and mentor coaching stay available to SeattleCoaches for as long we we're in business.)
2. ICF Membership: $245
3. The cost of the exam: $300 for ICF members. $500 for non-members.

That's it! As the "small craft brewery" of ICF coach training programs, we pride ourselves in being accessible and responsive. Be in touch any time with further questions.

The small print: The SeattleCoach Training Program has been approved for a total of 249 hours of Approved Coach Specific Training by the International Coach Federation (ICF). The Approved Coach Specific Training Hours designation is awarded to programs that follow the ICF Definition of Coaching, Code of Ethics, and Core Competencies, and that meet professional standards for coach training programs established by the ICF.

Module I and Module II fulfill your foundational 75 hours of coach-specific training. Click here to review other requirements for initial credentialing.
